State Space Modelling

converts a $n$th order differential equation into $n$ equations of first order
In an $n$th order state space model we need a first order differential equations.

We can convert a 2nd differential equation into 2 first order differential equations.

In general an $n$th order differential equation can be converted into an first order differential equation.